

Constructing A Global Law Against Violence And Human Rights Against Sexuality, Violence Against Women

Prof Dr M Sreedhar
Researcher/Author/ Social Influencer

Dr Ch Gayathri
Human Rights Activist/ Social Influencer/Author
Andhra Pradesh

Abstract

Women suffering from sexual- violence could affect their lives mentally and physically. This crime is growing rapidly each day, there is at least one crime of violence against women reported each individual day. There is an urgency to construct a global law against this crime and reform their human rights. There are many factors that are associated with violence against women that are discussed here. Women can face many health issues regarding this crime that could affect their lives and could ruin their health physically and mentally. Organizations and agencies should take some initiatives to ensure the security of the woman. Private health sectors should help the victims to come back in their normal lives. Human rights organizations should take care of the victims as well as their children for better well-being. Global law should impose the need for gender equality and rights according to the law.

Keywords- gender-oriented violence, global law. Introduction Girls suffering from sexual- violence could affect their lives mentally and physically. This includes threatening in several ways, cutting off liberty, and, happening in domestic or social life. Sex-oriented crime is a way that attempts to determine an act or any several acts directing to a person's gender discrimination. This crime is growing rapidly each day, there is at least one crime of violence against women reported each individual day. There is an urgency to construct worldwide procedures against crime to protect them and reform their rights to reduce violence.

I. Literature Review

Factors associated with violence against women

Sexual violence is the outcome of the factors in a widely large society, individual, family, and, communities. These all interact with each other about protective issues or securing the social respect of their community. The lower level of education can create a mind or atmosphere about sexual violence. A proper education that consists of consent, psychological behavior, and respect for women can reduce violence against women (Callaghan 2017). History of exposure to child maltreatment could also be a factor associated with violence against women. A child's mental health can be destructive by witnessing a daily quarrel in their mind that affects their mental peace. Antisocial personality disorder could also be a factor that replicates violence against women. Excessive use of alcohol is a factor that could cause abrupt violence against women. Beliefs in family honor and purity in sexuality could be a factor in violence against women. There are many families stuck in the culture of their family honor this cause could lead a violence against women by the whole family. Ideologies of male sexual entitlement are one of the greatest factors that could lead a person to create a violent atmosphere against a woman (Apatinga & Tenkorang 2018). Health problems creating the issue of violence among women Sexual violence can cause serious short-term or long-term problems for a woman such as mental, physical, sexual, and, reproductive health issues.

This could also affect their children's mental health and harm their well-being. Sex-oriented violence has a drastic consequences like suicide. It can give major injury to a woman suffering from violence. Forty-two percent of women that face violence in a private or public life have reported an injury as a consequence of this (Schmitt et al. 2016). There are some countries with less infrastructure of education that leads them to an atmosphere with superstitions. A country or religion that dominates women and portrays them as pride could lead to violence against women. Violence could lead to unintended pregnancy and transmission of sexual infections including HIV, In a study reported, that a woman associated with violence could have an impact on gynecological problems along with severe sexual infections. Physical problems can also includes head pain, abdominal back pain, and overall bad physical condition. This crime could lead to anxiety problems and traumatic stress. It is also associated with being a victim of violence or perpetration of violence. Intending to create a free life of crime Recognition of girls' physical conditions and the human responsibilities' of lawyers was constructed as a pivotal segment in the days of the early 90's. Both national and worldwide organizations provide the gadgets for addressing the way of any type of violence and its outcomes. Governmental or nongovernmental sectors including the community that nurtures internationally have their roles and responsibilities to do things within the sphere and not create any further problems for the victim (Sonrexa et al. 2013). Addressing the violence strictly in the countries and taking care of the victims. Governments can construct a law that will give them a chance to create a new life in accordance with the human rights and regulations of a particular country. Countries should be aware of the human rights and agreements and some treaties that they have signed. Ratification of human rights by complementing the laws will give freedom to the victims. A right life free of violence could help them to address a life that is anxiety-free, depression free, supports mental health, and several changes to be the architect of their new life.

Research methodology can explain the way the researcher carries out an approach. A methodology defines a researcher's approach to the research to ensure the reliable and effective aims and objectives of nature. It encompasses the way of collection the places of the data collection, and the proper way of analyzing the data. A sound research methodology provides some benefits such as other researchers wanting to replicate the research with enough information to do so, a researcher will refer to the methodology and explain their approach. A research philosophy is a set of primary beliefs that guide the design and execution of a study. 2 The two main research philosophies are positivism and interpretivism. These philosophies represent two different fundamentals in conducting a research approach (Bleiker et al. 2019 p. S4-S8) In positivism realization is free, can watch their observation towards the approach. In interpretivism, reality could be automatic it is shaped by the perceptions related to the approach Research approaches are the proper plans and procedures to conduct research. It spans the steps from board assumptions to detailed methods of data collection, analysis, and interpretation of data. There are three types of research approaches to create a proper interpretation of data such as inductive approach, deductive approach, and the mixing of both 110 (Al-Ababneh 2020 p- 75-91). The inductive approach starts with the data collection of data, analysis of data, and interpretation of data. This approach ends with the proper way to run a hypothesis to clarify the aims and objectives of the approach. The deductive approach starts with a hypothesis and ends with the collection of data, analysis of data, and interpretation of data.

Last but not least, the abductive approach generalizes the relationship among the data. Data collection is used to identify methods and structure. Research design is a productive blueprint for a scientific study, it includes research methodologies, techniques, and tools to conduct the research. It helps to identify the problems that could arise during the process of research and analysis. Resign design is broadly divided into quantitative and qualitative research design. Qualitative research design focuses on finding the answers to the question that arises to conducting an approach. It deals with questions and helps the approach to broaden their insights widely regarding the questions. This research is ideal for understanding customer behavior and the requirements for creating a proper research approach. Data findings and discussion There is a shred of growing evidence regarding this work to prevent violence against women. In 2019, the WHO and the U Women with twelve other bilateral agency endorsements 13 started a campaign named RESPECT WOMEN to prevent violence aimed at the policymakers. Each letter of RESPECT stands for one of seven strategies, relationship skills straitening, empowerment of women, security insured, poverty reduced, enabling environments such as schools, working sectors, and public sectors. The other two strategies that involve one of seven strategies are child and adolescent abuse prevention, the transformation of beliefs, norms, and attitudes. Reducing violence against women needs a constructing law that will protect women in a global way. Global law should impose strict consequences for violence among women. Constitutions and governments must be aware by the rules regulations and the documents they were aware of with human rights organizations (Boiko et al. 2017),

Global law should give a free hand to human rights activists to take care of the victims and secure a new life for them. Constitutions should make a law that will care for health support along with the well-being of the victim and their children. Health sectors should play an important role in preventing and responding to this issue. Health forestry should promote gender equality along with comprehensive educative curriculums relating to this. Generate evidence of this work and glorify the exact cause of the problem by surveys. Health caretakers also can include demographic surveys and survillieneve of health care providers. Global law should be focused more on gender equality and the rights imposed on gender equality.

There should be an urgency to take quick actions regarding the report to avoid any further consequences. Governments along with the human rights organization should take the initiative to give them a proper education about this crime that can reduce the numbers of this crime (Heard 2019. Individual countries should stay along with human rights to give them a new life as well as their children. Any male suffering from mental disorder problems their cases should be consulted with a psychiatrist. The psychiatrist will try to help him in his medicated way to start a new life. There are so many victims that are suffer from anxiety disorders, and depression their cases should be taken care of attentively to help them come back to normal life. Gender-based violence disproportionately affects girls and women in situations of displacement their exposure to GBV increased. There is a need for advocating adequate resources for the implementation of quality assurance programs that can reduce the number of gender-based violence. They should ensure all the gender-based survivors a timely access to services to meet their needs. These Is sectors should consider intervention research to identify the crime. Countries should amplify the global plan of action on violence and could watch the progress by documentation of lessons provided. There is a need to reverse the guidelines according to the violence and synthesize proof to prevent this type of heinous crime. Countries should collaborate with human rights organizations or some agencies to ensure the proper security and protection of girls.

TOGETHER FOR GIRLS is a program that takes the initiative to ensure the security of the girls by collecting their data and teaching them ways of prevention. Agencies or organizations should lead the action of coalition gender-based violence with the effective coordination of governments, philanthropists, civil society, and, youth leaders.

Conclusion There is always a need to construct a global law that takes necessary actions against violence against women. Many organizations and agencies are coming in front to reduce the violence. They are trying to give them a new life by reducing their anxiety, depression, and mental illness. Organizations should also take care of the well-being of victims' children along with the victims. Constitutions should impose strict laws against the criminal and should get punish according to their crime. Organizations should identify some health sectors to give post- traumatic healthcare to the victims. Governments should give proper education about consent and respecting a woman to reduce this type of crime. Constitutions should impose the law of gender equality and the rights according to gender equality to give them proper rights and respect. Organizations and agencies should take some initiatives that will ensure the security of the girls as well as boost their confidence in the way to prevent this type of crime.

References

- [1]. <https://doi.org/10.1177/1079063220910728>
- [2]. Bleiker, J., Morgan-Trimmer, S., Knapp, K., & Hopkins, S. (2019). Navigating the maze:
- [3]. Qualitative research methodologies and their philosophical foundations. Radiography, 25, S4-S8.
- [4]. Boiko, I. V., Mekh, Y. V., Soloviova, O. M., Somina, V. A., & Cherviakova, O. B. (2020).
- [5]. Universal human rights and state sovereignty. International Journal of Criminology and
- [6]. Sociology, 9(301),O. Gilchrist, E., Johnson, A., Thomson, K., Stephens-Lewis, D., Henderson, J., Gadd, D., &
- [7]. Gilchrist, G. Substance use and intimate partner abuse (IPA): A descriptive model of the pathways between substance use and IPA perpetration for men. Journal of family violence, 38(5), 855-868.